

Southern Echo, Inc.

A NATION LOSES TWO LEGENDARY CIVIL RIGHTS ICONS

Two iconic figures of the Civil Rights movement died yesterday, a serious blow for a nation still reeling from racial unrest, protests, and demands for equality. John Robert Lewis [left] died at age 80 after a battle with cancer. Rev. Cordy Tindell "C.T." Vivian [right] died at age 95 of natural causes. Both great men worked alongside the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. in the forefront of the historic struggle for racial justices in the 1960s. Over the years since, both men were known for causing "good trouble," a term Lewis often used when encouraging others to fight non-violently against racial injustice. These legendary men will be dearly missed, but we must continue the work of their lives and strive to cause "good trouble" in the name of racial equality.

#goodtrouble #southernecho1989
www.southernecho.org

A Nation Loses Two Legends

Two iconic figures of the Civil Rights movement died yesterday, a serious blow for a nation still reeling from racial unrest, protests, and demands for equality. John Robert Lewis [left] died at age 80 after a battle with cancer. Rev. Cordy Tindell "C.T." Vivian [right] died at age 95 of natural causes. Both great men worked alongside the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. in the forefront of the historic struggle for racial justices in the 1960s.

Over the years since, both men were known for causing "good trouble," a term Lewis often used when encouraging others to fight non-violently against racial injustice. These legendary men will be dearly missed, but we must continue the work of their lives and strive to cause "good trouble" in the name of racial equality.

Visit our website

Connect with us

